

The MBDI Athletes Mean Business Scholarship

The Minority Business Development Institute invites minority and women BRHS trade school or college bound high school seniors to apply for the “MBDI Athletes Mean Business Scholarship”. Bordentown based MBDI is a not-for-profit that provides education to help remove barriers to success for minority and women business owners. We hope to help inspire a local minority man and a local woman business leader of tomorrow by helping to defray the high cost of higher education through this scholarship.

About the Scholarship

The MBDI Athletes Mean Business Scholarships will be awarded to hardworking and resilient student athletes who illustrate a compelling desire to pursue higher education in spite of having confronted personal setbacks, including but not limited to a traumatic life event, incarceration of a parent, interrupted schooling, poverty and homelessness. Awards will be made to individuals seeking to learn a trade and/or go to college and make positive contributions to their local and global communities.

Why Bordentown, and why just athletes?

We are starting with Bordentown Regional High School because Bordentown is our home base, and MBDI founder David Cayemitte got his start in business on the soccer field. In the future we seek to diversify geographically, to include students who excel in areas beyond athletics, and to provide mentorship opportunities as well.
